What IS nuisance activity, you may ask?

In a nutshell, nuisance activities are those that can and do affect the quality of life for residents. And so was born April's fact sheet.

Many of the code-related reports that are received relate to nuisance violations, which are generally neighbor to neighbor and, often in residential areas. However, they can also crop up in commercial or mixed-use areas.

The goal of Code Enforcement is compliance, NOT enforcement. Being a "good neighbor" can head off complaints before they get out of hand and come to the attention of the city or create ongoing tensions between neighbors. Communication is a key factor, so the goal is to get neighbors to communicate with each other, whether it's discussing property issues or other difficult topics.

Picture this: A Code Enforcement Officer suddenly shows up on your doorstep to discuss the unruly vegetation in your front yard. While our Code Enforcement Officers are very friendly, this can catch people off guard and the initial reaction may be, "Oh no, I'm in trouble and am going to be fined" AND, "Did my neighbor report me?"

Now... Picture THIS, instead! Your neighbor's vegetation is getting out of hand. You have already introduced yourselves to each other by waving or saying "hi" when you pass, or you've taken the time to know your neighbor's name. That personal touch can be the difference between a nuisance complaint and the following:

"Oh, I'm sorry my grass is so out of control.... my spouse is often away for work and usually handles the yard work. I have three kids and a full-time job, so my free time is limited".

NOW.... You as a good neighbor might be able to offer, "Hey, I have a strong and energetic teenager who could easily mow your yard for $10.00! He also receives credit from his Boy Scout Troop for his community involvement".

To summarize: nuisance violations are generally easier to remedy when addressed early on and before they become an insurmountable and overwhelming task.

Our Code Enforcement Department is always happy to speak with residents and, together, come up with creative solutions to a problem. We also can provide connections to additional helpful resources.

Remember!! Communication is essential to being the neighbor you would like to have!!
